We are imagining a scattered site, short-term rental assistance with some flexibility based on the person's needs (1-6ish months). We expect that we can support 20 households exit our program annually into housing. Should I quarter the units so that it is reflective of the number of units we might be supporting at one time as opposed to total over the year?	Enter the number of units your proposed budget will support over a 12 month time period. The total number of units is what drives the budget, not the number of people.

Would that be most appropriate to be listed under the Support Services budget in the category of "Assistance with Moving Costs"?	Application fees and deposits can be included in your Support Services budget, and may be appropriate under Assistance with Moving Costs or or Utility Deposits, depending on the specific expense.
